To inspect the logo, on Chrome, right click and click inspect, there you will see that logo is indeed transparent and there is white background.

Here is another example, with dark purple background instead: <https://switch.ag/>

To sum up:

1. Please dont confuse website backgrounds with the logo, like challenger.
2. Even if we would consider website backgrounds as a part of the logo, top aggregators are using a white background, thus we can say a logo with dark purple background is not most widely used. Current submission would still be valid.
3. I only listed top aggregators here, there are many examples (see requesters evidence). If the question is “what is the most widely used logo?” then most popular websites should be the answer.
